THEATRE TALK NO. 2.

MRS. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH, THE AMERICAN NOVELIST WHO WROTE THAT FAMOUS STORY, "THE HIDDEN HAND," was born in Washington D. C., December 26, 1819. She graduated from Henshaw Seminary in 1837, and taught school from 1844 to 1849. She began writing short stories for the Baltimore Saturday Visitor, and in 1849 published her first novel, "Retribution." She became very popular, her writing appealing largely to women. In 1856 her world renowned "The Hidden Hand" appeared as a serial story in a famous story paper of that day called "THE NEW YORK LEDGER," owned by Robert B. Enner, the owner of the world known famous horses, Dexter and Maid S., the fastest trotters of their time. It was then published in book form, and other than the Bible, has had wider circulation than any other known book, over fifteen million various copies of the story having been placed in circulation since its first appearance, this including the French, German, Spanish and other translations. The story has been dramatized a number of times, but never in the concise and happy manner which has rewarded EUGENE MOORE'S efforts, the version which will be presented in this city in the near future.

"I Am Black, Donald"

"THE HIDDEN HAND" IS A PLAY WHICH APPEALS TO THE MAJORITY OF PEOPLE ON ACCOUNT OF ITS HEART INTEREST—in fact a combination of both pathos and comedy that makes it delightful. Like "The Old Homestead," "Human Hearts," "Arizona" and "Alabama" a play must be intense to hold the interest of the auditors and at the same time have sufficient pathos to touch the strings of the human heart. "THE HIDDEN HAND" is a plain, sweet, comedy story of the sun-kissed hills and valleys of old Virginia where the latch string is always hanging outside the door, and every man and woman honest until proven otherwise.

Hundreds of the best people in this great and glorious land have visited "THE HIDDEN HAND" during the past two years. There must be a reason for this—if they did not like it they certainly would not spend time and money. The performance is as clean as a bound's tooth, made up of wholesome incidents and comedy.

These are a few of the factors of its success.

BASKET BALL CONTEST.

Neither team willing to meet the other on any but neutral grounds the Crandon City and Antigo Business College basketball teams have arranged to fight the deciding battle for the championship of Northern Wisconsin in Rhinelander. The game will be played Saturday evening, March 7, at the Armory and will be played under eastern rules which allow a much faster style of playing. In addition to the championship feature, it is said a heavy side bet has been posted. The teams have also put up $50.00 as forfeit money in case of non-appearance of either team Saturday evening.

Partisan feeling runs high in both Crandon and Antigo, and the only way to insure an absolutely even contest was to play on neutral grounds with neutral officials. Reed of Rhinelander will act as referee and Cady of Blumwood will umpire. A special train over the Northwestern has been chartered and is expected to bring along some 200 or more rooters from Crandon and Antigo.

Rhinelander lovers of the game are fortunate. It will be an opportunity to witness a contest where both sides have "blood in their eye", in a sense, and mean to put up the strongest game that will be seen here for some time.

The Military band will be in attendance both for the game and for the roller skating which follows. The game will be called at 8:15 o'clock.

TO THE VOTERS OF THIS CITY.

I have decided to become a candidate for the office of Mayor and wish you to know my views upon the questions the city is most interested in, for every voter should know a candidate's platform. If elected mayor, it will be my policy to promote the best interests of the city. I believe in a square deal with equal rights to all and special privileges to none. As a member of the Board of Review, I shall endeavor to see that taxation is just and equal and shall enter to no faction or factions. So long as our city licenses saloons, I believe they are entitled to do business under proper control. If elected I will insist that this is done.

A few places where liquor is sold have always used screens or shades in front of their windows during closed hours, giving them special privileges over their competitors; this should not be. If elected mayor, I shall see that no special privileges are granted. I shall demand a clear view into the interior of places where liquor is sold. The law forbids the sale of liquor to minors and habitual drunkards and this law shall be rigidly enforced by me.

The water works controversy is now in the hands of one of the best attorneys in the State and any action to purchase them, before a legal decision is reached, will be vetoed by me. With the present outlook the city should be moderate in the expenditure of its money and it shall be my aim to carry out this policy.

With the assistance of the city council these pledges will be carried out.

CHAS. ROEPKE.

"THE HIDDEN HAND."

The "Hidden Hand," a new dramatization of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth's story of old Virginia before the war will be at the Grand Opera House one night Saturday March 7th. The play is in four acts and the familiar characters of the story, Captain, Black Donald, Old Hurricane, Mrs. Condit, and the extremely funny dukes, Wool and Pitapat, appear in the drama. The picturesque scenery, some of the finest in the United States, is reproduced. The romance, melodramatic, intensity, and the mystery of the story are most cleverly brought out in a series of powerful scenes.

His funeral occurred Monday morning.

CEMENT FACTORY AT STURGEON BAY.

Plans for the new $1,000,000 cement factory to be constructed at Sturgeon Bay by the Badger Portland Cement company, have been completed and were submitted to the officers of the company. The plans call for a plant with a daily capacity of 2,000 barrels of cement. E. A. Edmunds of Appleton, president and general manager of the new company, stated that building operations will commence as soon as the weather will permit. The officers of the company, E. A. Edmunds, president and general manager; John McNaughton, vice-president; C. C. Wayland, secretary, and C. G. Cannon, treasurer, together with W. H. Simmons of Grand Rapids, who will be the superintendent of the plant, held a conference with C. H. Hartley and F. H. Josslyn of Oshkosh in regard to the power for operating the plant. A great water power engineering project will be carried out in connection with the erection of this factory. It is proposed to conduct power for the operation of the huge plant from the falls of the Peshigo river at a point ten miles above Crivitz, across Green Bay to Sturgeon Bay. The factory will demand 2,000 horse power and this will be transmitted from the rapids to the factory, a distance of forty-four miles, by cable.—Ex.

PROHIBITION IN MARINETTE.

There is good reason for the panic which has overtaken the liquor interests regarding the spread of prohibition. Oklahoma has come into the union with prohibition riveted into its constitution for a period of twenty years. Georgia has enacted prohibition, and has already entered upon its enforcement, the law having gone into effect on the first of January. The Alabama legislature took itself and the state by surprise at its special session last November, called to enact railroad laws, by enacting a prohibitory law, which goes into effect on January 1 next. Now Mississippi has followed the example of the others and within the last week has enacted a prohibitory law by overwhelming majorities. Altogether the sky looks equally squally for the saloons.

The Marinette Eagle Star says: "The movement against the saloons in Marinette is being vigorously pushed and the adherents of the cause seem to be greatly encouraged. They say that the petition for it will be filed at the proper time and that no great difficulty was encountered in securing signatures."

The Scandinavian ministers, it is said, are making a house to house canvass in the matter. As far as known no action has been taken by people opposed to the movement. Very little of the matter is heard on the streets and what work is being done on either side is being done quietly.

The saloons here have never lived up to the law and they have brought down on themselves this movement.

WISCONSIN STATE CIVIL SERVICE.

Notice is hereby given that a general competitive examination will be held at the City Council Room in Rhinelander, on Saturday, March 14th, 1908, beginning at nine o'clock a. m., for the position of Deputy Oil Inspector for District 50, including Forest, Florence, Oneida and Vilas counties.

The examination is open to men only. Candidates must be over 21 years of age, should reside in the district in which service is to be rendered, and if appointed, must consent to reside at a point easily accessible to places where oil is to be inspected. Persons interested in the sale of oil are not eligible. Applicants may be required to give bond.

Persons interested should write to the State Civil Service Commission at Madison, or to Mr. E. A. Lowell at Rhinelander for application blanks. STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, F. E. Doty, Secretary.

NEW USE OF WHISKEY.

Residents of Marinette and Menominee have recently introduced a new dish, "Sparrow pie." The birds are caught by allowing them to eat oats soaked in whiskey. They soon succumb to the intoxicating repast and fall over and are easily caught. It has long been the custom of "crooks" to intoxicate their victims for the sake of gain but it seems a mean trick to fool the unsuspecting creatures by allowing a meal, only to give them death.

MASK BALL.

The mask ball given by the Royal Neighbors, Monday evening was as usual a success both socially and financially. The two first prizes were won by Miss Addie Pegg and Ernest Henning, who advertised "Sunny Monday," washing soap. The comic prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. Skubal.

INDIAN MARRIAGE VALID.

Ruling Will Have Bearing on Many Estates.

The ruling of Judge Henry Kreiss in the Outagamie county court in probate that a marriage under the Indian law is just as valid as a marriage by priest or justice, will have an effect on many Indian estates which have been disposed of without considering the claims of children born of such Indian marriages.

The ruling was made in the case of the estate of Abraham Wheelock, who had had three wives. The first one he married, the second one he took under the tribal law and the third one he married. After his death, his two sons, offspring of his first marriage, sold his property without regard to any claim that Dolly Dextator, Wheelock's daughter by his Indian marriage, might have. Judge Kreiss now rules that she is entitled to an equal share in the estate, and the man who bought the farm from the two brothers will probably be the loser.

THE IRISH SENATOR.

All the world loves to laugh. Without song and laughter this life would be but a dreary existence at best. The book that will cause us the most laughter is the one most eagerly sought at the counter, the comic supplement of the newspapers are the first sections looked for by every member of the family, no matter whether old or young. The funny fellow who is ever ready with an odd story or a joke, is the first considered amongst the invitations to reception or party. Look where you will, you find the humorist, the man who smiles, is most loved, and why not? For his wit chases away our troubles, even as the sun drives forth the rain. Laughter acts as a salt that gives savor to life. And so it is with the play. The one that will amuse us most is the one which comes to the Opera House on March 10th. Every line of this comedy has been written to create laughter, and every actor in the cast, without exception, has been engaged to make you smile.

Jan. L. McCabe, the popular comedian, who enjoys a well earned reputation and bright, merry little Mazie Trumbull, who is known from ocean to ocean as "the girl with the smile that won't come off" is at the head of this comedy organization. Mazie is one of the best of American comedians, magnetic and always bubbling over with mirth. To see "The Irish Senator" is to laugh, to tell of it to your friends means that they will laugh; to think of it means to laugh again.

ATTENTION, YOUNG MEN.

Do the young men of this city realize the advantages of a military education? They have the opportunity to get instruction free of cost by joining Company "L". Yet, we are told by Captain Brown that instead of having a "waiting list" as they do in many cities of the size of Rhinelander, he has at times actually been obliged to solicit recruits. He has now room for half a dozen.

Any young man 18 years or older, sound and well and of good character is eligible.

Boys, do not let the opportunity slip. If you do, you may be sorry some day, when this country is involved in a war of some magnitude which is very likely to occur in your life time. When the trouble comes, if you have the rudiments of a military education, which you can get in the National Guard, you can go to the front, and without these the chances are very slim. Do not miss this opportunity.

BAPTIST.

On account of the deep snow the attendance at the evening service last Sunday dropped to 150.

Pastor Gales is acting as superintendent of the Sunday School in the absence of Mr. D. B. Stevens.

Special revival meetings will be held every evening, except Saturday, beginning Sunday March 8th. Rev. Thomas W. Gales will preach.

As usual, a large crowd gathered at the Taffy Pull last Friday evening. The program was exceedingly well rendered, and the taffy "just right" for pulling.

Rev. Thomas W. Gales has started a fund to paint and repair the church during the coming summer. He is asking for $300, and is to raise one-third of this amount by what he calls the pastor's fund. One idea is the issue of one hundred shares in the repairing and painting fund which are being sold at par value $1 per share. The building is a beautiful and substantial one and standing as it does in such a commanding position it ought to be a subject of civic pride to have it in good repair.

MOTHERS, DON'T SCOLD.

This Information Will Prove a Boon to Rhinelander Mothers.

If a juvenile member of your family lacks control over the kidney secretions at night, do not scold or whip the child. The coating or lining of the bladder is inflamed and the secretions are so full of acid that they irritate that organ, and bed wetting is the result. The hundreds of testimonials from every State in the Union, all declaring children have been cured of this weakness by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, prove at least in their case the remedy did what was promised, namely, stopped the so-called habit. Here is proof for Rhinelander mothers.

Mrs. Alexander Denoyer, 728 Dorr Ave., Rhinelander, Wis., says: "I have a son who has been troubled with weak kidneys for ten years, and at times he has been in a serious condition, especially if he got wet or did a hard day's work or played any more than usual, he was laid up for days. I got many different remedies for him but none helped him until I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procured them at J. J. Reardon's drug store. He began their use about six weeks ago, and he is now almost free from any pain, he sleeps all nights, not having to rise at all, is working every day, and feels much stronger and better in every way. I hope others will try Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

A CELEBRATED ROMANCE.

Fred G. Conrad's special production of Eugene Moore's new and up to date dramatization of Mrs. Southworth's celebrated romance of the old days in the backwoods of Virginia will be at the Opera House, March 7. The story is the greatest that ever came from the fertile imagination and intensely dramatic gift of this famous woman novelist, and its characters and scenery have been transferred to the stage with the skill of one of the most successful actor-dramatists of the present time.

NEW R. R. DOCK AT ASHLAND.

The Chicago & North-Western road at Ashland is tearing down and replacing its old ore dock here, intending to have a higher and more economical structure. This new dock will be seventy feet high from water line to dock, fifty feet wide and of about 42,000 tons' storage capacity. Timbers from this old dock will be saved and used in the construction of a coal-handling pier along side.—Ex.

PAUL ROY MUST BE TRIED IN FRANCE
FRENCHMAN WILL NOT BE TURNED OVER FOR ALLEGED MURDER IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.
SELF-DEFENSE TO BE PLEA IN CASE TRIAL
Woman Lived in Handsome Apartment in Paris, But Was Not Considered Wealthy—Roy Can Be Extradited, Say Officials.
Paris, Feb. 29.—The French authorities are still without official notification of the Newington (N. H.) tragedy, in which Paul Roy, a Frenchman, now here, is charged by his American wife, Glacia Calla, with the murder of her brother on January 2. It is expected some time must elapse before the machinery of the French criminal courts can be set in motion on the case. The question of extradition of Roy to the United States is not involved, as France, like most European countries, does not surrender a citizen, but tries such subjects in the French courts for crimes committed abroad.
Law Must Wait on Diplomacy.
The United States government, therefore, can only call the attention of the French government to the crime, setting forth the facts in connection therewith. This will have to be carried on through the regular diplomatic channels at Washington. Even if the cable is employed the arrival of the documents must be awaited before judicial inquiry can be opened here.
No new features of the case were unearthed Friday. The family of Paul Roy appear confident that he will be able to prove that he shot Carkins in self-defense in case the matter comes to trial. It is explained that the name Roy P. Emile on the marriage register in Boston, which recites the union on October 7 of last of Roy and Glacia Calla, was due to the fact that Roy could not make the clerk understand that Roy was a patronymical and not his Christian name.
Detective Goron, who is acting as Roy's spokesman, refuses to disclose the facts the family has obtained regarding Glacia Calla's past life, neither will he make any statement regarding the woman known as the Baroness von Orendorff, with whom Glacia Calla lived. He explains that the family, although not recognizing the marriage, has no desire to sully the reputation of the woman.
Woman Not Considered Rich.
According to those who knew Glacia Calla when she was in Paris, she did not have entrance to exclusive society. Although she was not considered rich, she lived in a handsome apartment and was chaperoned by the so-called Baroness von Orendorff, whom she called her aunt. Her musical studies were not interrupted by her social pleasure. She had many admirers, among whom was Paul Roy, and toward the end of her stay he was recognized as her favorite suitor.
Goron desires to have it made clear that when he first began his inquiries in America at the request of the family with the view of securing Paul Roy's return to France, neither he nor the family knew that Roy killed Carkins. This fact developed first from the interview that Goron's agent had with Glacia Calla on February 4.
Believe Roy Can Be Extradited.
Concord, N. H., Feb. 29.—Attorney General Eastman and County Solicitor Hatchelder held a conference at the state capital Friday with Gov. Floyd and Secretary of State Pearson in reference to the extradition of Paul E. Roy, accused of the murder of George A. Carkins at Newington, on January 2. It was expected that the papers in the case would not be ready for transmission to the state department at Washington before Saturday.
The attorney general said that in view of his deliberations with the county solicitor, the governor and secretary of state he was firmly convinced that Roy could be extradited from France and brought to New Hampshire to stand trial for the crime of which he is accused.

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST IN THE VARIOUS TOWNS.
LONG FIGHT AT AN END
City of Superior Virtual Victor in Litigation Over Quotations Required for Use by City Board of Trade.
Superior.—The litigation that has tied up the Superior board of trade in the grain business for the last two years has been settled. The suits were those brought by the Chicago board of trade and the Minneapolis chamber of commerce and the adjustment is one that shows the contention of the Superior board of trade in the matter has been correct. The local board is being reorganized and it is expected that it will be put on a firm basis so as to carry on business here.
The statement of the settlement as given out by the board of directors is: In the summer of 1905 after the passage of the Wisconsin inspection law the business of the Superior board of trade became much more active and much enthusiasm was shown. Many new members were taken in and the price of memberships ran up from $50 as high as $250 and $300. In the fall, owing to the closing of the elevators no warehouse receipts were issued in Superior and the trading on the board was largely for Minneapolis or Chicago delivery.
Warehouse receipts upon those markets were in fact received for current delivery upon the board and quotations were sent out accordingly for the prices made for Chicago and Minneapolis delivery. In the spring of 1906 the Chicago board of trade and the Minneapolis chamber of commerce each commenced action in the federal court primarily to enjoin the Superior board of trade from using or sending out the Chicago or Minneapolis quotations, claiming that the Superior board of trade was receiving and using the continuous quotations of those boards.
The adjustment is such that the Superior board of trade shall not use continuous quotations and that it may receive and use the 15-minute quotations of the Chicago board.

IMMIGRATION FROM SOUTH EXPECTED
U. S. FARMERS ARE RECOGNIZING SPLENDID OPPORTUNITIES OFFERED BY WESTERN CANADA.
St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 9, 1908.—Recent indications are that the Canadian Northwest will draw an exceptional heavy movement of new settlers from the United States this year. It should surpass the banner record for 1907. This is not only based on the fact that the Americans have come to realize generally that the Canadian Northwest offers splendid opportunities, but also because the railroads have awakened to the fact and are offering rates to the Canadian Northwest which are exceptionally favorable.
The lines which lead to St. Paul from the east and south are offering homeseekers' rates to the Canadian Northwest this year which are on a parity with those in existence to the southwest for a couple of seasons.
These rates can be obtained from any agent of the Canadian government, who will be pleased to give all information possible regarding those districts which offer the greatest inducements to settlers. The weather throughout Western Canada has been remarkably good this year. A telegram from the winter wheat belt of Southern Alberta dated at Cardston, Alberta, January 29th, says:
"This winter up to January 25 was nothing short of a marvel. In fact, it was the finest anyone can remember for twenty-five years though there have been others nearly as good. The days were fine, sunny and warm with light frosts at night. Overcoats and gloves, etc., were discarded by most people in the day time. There was so little frost in the ground that post holes could be dug without any trouble after the first inch was broken through. Winter wheat remained fresh and green although the storm storm. If there is an early spring, winter wheat should gain a great start."
Amongst the reports of the yield of last year the following extracts are taken:
H. Howe, of Magrath, Alta., writes on November 1907, says: "I have 70 acres in crop, 60 acres of wheat and seven acres of oats. My average yield of oats was 35 bushels to the acre, and of wheat 45 bushels. The value to me was $35 per acre."
J. F. Haycock, of Magrath, writes in November: "I had 65 acres in winter wheat, which went 60 bushels to the acre; oats averaged 50 bushels. I also had 12 tons of hay worth $10 per ton. I got 600 bushels of potatoes from three acres of land; I got eight tons per acre from five acres of sugar beets."
J. F. Bradshaw, of Magrath, had 1,020 acres of winter wheat last year which averaged 39½ bushels to the acre. The value of his farm products per acre was: Wheat, $31.50; oats, $11.20 and barley, $25.15.

LUCKY FRENCHMAN HAS WON THE LOVE OF GLADYS DEACON

After the Affair of a Smitten Prince and a Duke "Turned Down," Comes the Triumph of Young Baron de Charette, and Another International Romance Is Launched

NEW YORK.—At last Miss Gladys Deacon, of New York and Boston, London and Paris, has found the man upon whom she can bestow her heart and hand. Her engagement to the young Baron Antoine de Charette is announced. For five years Miss Deacon has been one of the most-talked-of young women of society on both sides of the Atlantic. The gossip have had her engaged to a dozen eligible, from princes down to plain "misters." But all the time she had been laughing up her sleeve—they were all wrong, of course.

There was the young crown prince of Germany, for example. The credulous had him head over heels in love with "La belle Americaine" and willing to renounce his claims to the throne of the German empire for love of her. It took an official announcement from both sides to stop the talk, and even then there were those who believed it to be true—that young Prince Fritz was desperately smitten. Then there was the duke of Norfolk, premier peer of England, and the prince of Lichtenstein and Lord Brooke and Lord Francis Hope and the Hon. Claude Lowther were reported as about to marry the vivacious American girl, to say nothing of as many more, all lights of considerable magnitude in the social firmament.

But everybody was wrong—at least wrong in that Miss Deacon would marry any of these most desirable men. Would have taken High Rank. As the wife of the duke of Norfolk she would have taken precedence of every peeress in England; as Lady Brooke or Lady Francis Hope she would have had an irreproachable position at court.

Gladys Deacon is the eldest daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon, of Boston and New York; her mother was the lovely Florence Baldwin, daughter of Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, U. S. N. Society even now whispers of the tragedy that clouded the lives of Gladys Deacon and her younger sisters.

It was just 16 years ago—to be precise, February 17, 1892—when the wires flashed the news from one end of the civilized world to the other—Edward Parker Deacon, an American, had shot and killed Mr. Emilio Abellio, a well-known Parisian, whom he had surprised in his wife's boudoir. Abellio tried to hide behind a sofa, but Deacon back, so that a Jew might be known "for and aft." When a Jew was found without the badge he was fined. Evidence of the wearing of this badge is found as late as 1592 in France. The forefathers of the Spanish Jews carried a yellow and red badge—the men on their breast, the women on their foreheads. The wearing of the badge was not so prevalent in Italy, but the municipalities almost all required them. The badge was known as the "o" from its shape, resembling probably the ring in France. English Jews should feel the distinction of having had a peculiar sort of badge forced upon their ancestors. It was first in the form of a band—first white and then yellow, and later Jews were required to wear a badge with the shape of the Tules of the Law. In Germany yellow badges were worn, but there the hat was the chief means of identification. In Austria and in Poland there are few traces of the badge, but in Hungary Jews wore a badge on their left breast. It is interesting to know that in Crete at the present day some of the houses of Jews are marked with the "o."—American Hebrew.

Her skin is fair, very white and almost transparent. There is almost no coloring in her cheeks, yet she blushes beautifully when she is interested. Her lips are of that brilliant red which no cosmetic save perfect health can give. Her nose is pure Greek; her mouth a Cupid's bow. The chin is strong and firm. Her teeth are dazzling.

She speaks French, German and Italian with equal fluency, and her Parisian accent when she speaks English is altogether charming. Her taste in dress is undeniable; she always appears in the masterpieces of the French modistes. She is a perfect dancer, a rattling good hand at bridge and she can play billiards with the best of the men.

As soon as she was well launched in society, Miss Deacon began making strong friendships in the great world. Some of the most important people in the Parisian set of Paris became her intimates; in London she chummed with the duchess of Marlborough, the duchess of Devonshire, the dowager duchess of Manchester and Mrs. Arthur Paget, all of them of tremendous social advantage to Miss Deacon.

Suitors in Plenty. Mrs. Baldwin had Lady Somerset's house in Mayfair, London; a beautiful little mansion opposite the Chapel of Our Lady of Consolation, in Paris, and a villa at Versailles.

With all these charms, it could not be doubted that Gladys Deacon would soon have suitors enough to satisfy even the most exacting debutante. The first soon appeared—to be precise, in 1900. He was Claude Lowther, called the handsomest man in England. Together they made a striking pair, and the matchmakers had them engaged—by rumor. But it was not to be. Gladys Deacon went her way and Mr. Lowther went his. For a brief period the prince of Lichtenstein was favored; then he was dismissed.

Next in line came Lord Francis Hope, who was even then getting his divorce from May Yoke, the one-time soubrette, who had run away with Capt. Putnam Bradley Strong, son of the late Mayor Strong of New York. But Gladys Deacon gave the noble lord, who some day may be the duke of Newcastle, his conge, and he married some one else.

Admiral Baldwin was the richest officer in the navy, and when he died a splendid inheritance went to Mrs. Deacon, or Mrs. Baldwin, as she preferred to be called. Married when 17 years old, she was barely 34 when the scandal came; she was even more beautiful as Mrs. Deacon than she had been as Florence Baldwin, the bride of Edward Parker Deacon, the reserved, awkward man of 40.

Europe took up the daughter Gladys as it had taken up the mother a decade before. Aristocratic society welcomed her in every capital in Europe. In the Bois she was saluted as if she were a princess—but then Gladys Deacon was to the manner born. She was at home in Mayfair as she was in Unter den Linden. In winter she became the bright, particular star along the Riviera and in Italy thoroughly cosmopolitan grew the beautiful American girl, who spoke with a strong French accent and frankly admitted that she hardly knew anything about the United States, though she was American to the core.

Europe found everything to admire in the beautiful girl fresh from the convent. Gladys Deacon is the ideal Anglo-Saxon type in face and coloring. Her mass of hair is the palest fawn, and it waves naturally. Her eyes are large, rather long than round, and a deep violet blue. Her eyebrows are almost black, very narrow and exquisitely arched. Her eyelashes are black as well and long and sweeping.

Then came the affair which nearly brought about international complications. Only Miss Deacon's natural good sense saved the day. The German emperor, who wished his eldest son, heir to the throne, to see something in English life, graciously consented that Prince Fritz should pay a visit to Blenheim palace, the regal home of the duke of Marlborough and his American bride, one Consuelo Vanderbilt. The duchess, who wanted to make his stay as pleasant as possible, invited Miss Deacon to meet him. The prince, always susceptible to feminine charms, had already seen and admired her on the continent. Amid the congenial surroundings of the English country life their former acquaintance ripened rapidly. The prince so far forgot himself as to fall desperately in love, though well he knew that he must marry royalty to inherit the Kaiser's throne.

Could Not Share Throne. He immediately proposed. Miss Deacon knew very well that the best the prince could offer her was a morganatic marriage, and she rejected his and her son, Van Leer Polk, to Italy to live. It was in Rome that Antoinette Polk met Baron de Charette, then serving at the Vatican. The impressionable Italian had already hailed the fair American as the most beautiful woman who had ever come to their shores, and the Baron de Charette agreed with them. He laid siege to Miss Polk's heart, won her and brought her home to Paris as his bride.

One son was born, Antoine. From his mother the young man inherits splendid plantations in Tennessee and from his paternal side some of the greatest art treasures in France. Among them is a portrait of Queen Marie Antoinette by Mme. Vigee le Brun, given by the queen to the Duchess de Choiseul, now coming in direct succession to the young Baron, fourth in line. The wedding takes place at the fashionable season in Paris and will be one of the social events of the year. And then the matchmakers can no longer play fast and loose with Gladys Deacon's heart and hand.

Previous Ruling Modified. The attorney general ruled that a foreign life insurance company may be admitted to do business in Wisconsin without at first having 500 policyholders with $1,000,000 or more of insurance and with one premium paid on all policies. The ruling is a modification of one made some time ago. The old Colony Life Insurance company of Chicago recently applied for a license but the insurance commissioner was uncertain under the ruling of the attorney general whether it could be admitted as it did not have $1,000,000 of insurance in force. The attorney general rules that the company, if it satisfies the commissioner that it is sound and solvent and its business methods are proper and legitimate, may be admitted notwithstanding the previous ruling.

Steel Contract Awarded. The Modern Steel Structure company of Waukesha was provisionally awarded the contract for furnishing the steel for the east wing of the new state capitol. The company's bid of $51,987 was the lowest of nine submitted, the others ranging up to $60,000. Owing to the recent big drop in the price of steel, the successful bid was about $12,000 lower than the price paid for a similar amount of steel for the new west wing, which is now up and being finished.

Confers with Van Hise. Rev. Wallace Britrick, secretary of the general education board, came to Madison to confer with President Van Hise of the state university in regard to disbursements for the benefit of colleges from the fund of which he is one of the custodians. As the University of Wisconsin is a state institution, it cannot, according to the terms of the $20,000,000 endowment fund of the general education board, receive any financial assistance.

Two Banks Increase Capital. State Banking Commissioner M. C. Bergh has approved an amendment filed by the Bank of Payette to its articles of incorporation, increasing its capital stock from $5,000 to $10,000, and one filed by the Farmers' and Merchants' bank of Chetek increasing its capital from $5,000 to $10,000.

Judge Horan in Peacock's Place. Gov. Davidson appointed Judge Emmet Horan of Eau Claire a member of the state board of normal school regents to succeed J. A. Peacock of Oconomowoc. The appointment is for five years. Judge Horan is a Democrat.

Holy Rollers Gain Converts. The Holy Rollers, who have invaded western Wisconsin, are securing a number of converts. At Norway Ridge 16 persons were baptized in the Beaver river.

Must Furnish Policy Valuations. State Insurance Commissioner Beidle has notified six foreign life insurance assessment companies operating in Wisconsin that they will have to furnish him with a valuation of their policies under the new standard of valuation of this state if they desire a license to continue business here. The Wisconsin Life Insurance Company of Madison was re-licensed to operate in the state during the year beginning March 1. The company paid a tax of $1,550.60.

Will Work for Better Roads. "Better Roads" will be the watchword of the rural mail carriers in Fond du Lac county for the ensuing year. The state legislature is to be requested to adopt a law providing for uniform width of runners on sleighs and other winter vehicles. The following officers were elected at a meeting just held: President, O. E. Pasko, Fond du Lac; vice president, Joseph Goss, Campbellsport; secretary, E. G. Howard, Oakfield; treasurer, J. J. Stratz, Fond du Lac.

Arrange for Big Meeting. A big parade in which 3,000 people are expected to march, public meetings which will be addressed by prominent men, and entertainments of various kinds, are some of the features of the convention of the Catholic benevolent orders of the state and the Young Men's societies, which will be held in Madison June 6-8.

Tobacco Men Choose Officers. The Wisconsin Tobacco Growers and Dealers' association elected John H. Bates of Stoughton president, S. B. Hedges of Janesville vice-president, A. L. Fisher of Edgemoor secretary and F. W. Coon of Edgemoor treasurer. Prize awards for the best exhibits of tobacco leaf were as follows: W. W. Powell, town of Victory, $25; G. Roen of Orfordville, $15; A. C. Ellikson of Arlington, $10, and George Wee of Stoughton, $5. Three seasons instead of one will be held next year.

Farmers in Organization. The farmers of Menominee county have just completed the organization of the Dunn County Poultrymen's association, with J. D. Miller of Red Cedar president and Louis Elhart of Menominee secretary and treasurer. A movement to form a horticultural society has also been inaugurated, and a woman's auxiliary to the breeders' and dairymen's and horticultural associations has been formed, of which Miss Angeline Wood of the Dunn County School of Agriculture is president.

SOUTH DAKOTA COUPLE MARRIED IN THE DARK

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN AND BRIDE HAVE KNOT TIED IN GLOOM.

Lead, S. D.—Marriage always has been called "a leap in the dark," but it remained for Miss Rose Hynan of this city to be married literally in the dark. Her marriage to James M. Fontaine, a leading young business man of the town, perhaps was the most remarkable on record in the northwest country. After the young woman had promised to become Mrs. Fontaine, she began to look forward to the wedding day with regret, if not absolute fear. Naturally shy in society, she believed she would be embarrassed and bewildered when in the presence of a large company of friends she took Mr. Fontaine for "better or worse." She feared she might faint away, or make such a spectacle of herself that she forever would be shamed. Mr. Fontaine tried to persuade her that no one would make fun of her or in any way would attempt to make her life miserable. She would not believe him and was almost on the point of breaking her engagement and calling the wedding off, when her lover made the proposition that they be married in the dark.

Accordingly, they began to lay their plans. The groom-to-be did not let any one in on the secret except his best man, Henry J. Spooler. The wedding night arrived, and 100 or more guests filled into the bride's home. They were greeted with the sight of a profusion of bridal roses and other beautiful floral decorations.

The guests all were seated, and were awaiting the arrival of the bride couple, when Mr. Spooler, the "best man," turned off the electric lights. At first all was consternation. The visitors could not imagine what was the matter. Then Mr. Spooler announced that the wedding would take place in the dark, save for a candle which would be placed in such a position that the minister could see his lines.

Presently the bride and groom appeared at a side door. They quickly stepped to their places, where, by the uncertain light of the candle, their faces scarcely could be seen. The minister spoke the few words that made them one, and, before the bewildered guests were aware of what had happened, the happy couple escaped from the room and entered a carriage. They were driven to the depot, where they boarded a train for the east. When the carriage left the house the lights were turned on. Every corner of the house was searched, but no trace of the runaway couple could be found. Mrs. Fontaine not only had hidden her blushes, but she had prevented any one seeing her wedding gown, although it was just as beautiful as it would have been had the wedding been a conventional one.

HER CHOICE OF DEMISE. Pathetic Thought of Little Girl Who Had Lost Playmate.

Mary had for neighbor a small playmate, a much-loved and attractive boy. The little lad rushed across the street one day, throwing back a glance at his mother. At that instant a trolley car swept around the corner and the resulting tragedy threw the town into mourning. Each family wept as though its own son had been lost. Mary was utterly inconsolable and, little as she had previously known of death, realized in a childish way the added horror of this one. In her convulsive grief, and while her father and mother sat with sobs in their throats and tears overflowing, Mary straightened up and sobbed:

"Mother, when I die I hope it will be of a disease and not of a damage!"

EXCHANGES DAUGHTER FOR JOB. Man, 50 Years Old, Makes Startling Admission on Witness Stand.

Los Angeles, Cal.—On the witness stand Judson H. Coe, 50 years old, admitted writing letters in which he agreed to exchange his 16-year-old daughter, Ethel, for a position with a railroad. According to the letters the agreement was made in 1902 with G. W. Smith, who was employed by the Illinois Central at Waterloo, Ia. Coe had been summoned into court by Judge Bordwell to explain the letters which were introduced by Mrs. Theodora Coe in her suit for divorce. Coe was granted an interlocutory decree. Coe had previously been divorced from three wives, and a fourth is dead.

When he owned the letters Judge Bordwell said: "I don't want to listen to another word from you. You are a stench in the nostrils of the people in any community in which you reside."

Sleeps in Corpse's Box. Fredlund, N. J.—While digging a grave at St. Jerome cemetery here, Mike Bosack, who had too strongly fortified himself against the cold, fell asleep, and to save themselves from worry about his safety his companions put him in the rough box in the grave and then placed the lid on without fastenings. When the funeral arrived the undertaker directed an assistant to remove the rough box lid. When he did so Bosack sat upright and wanted to know what was doing. The mourners were panic-stricken until the situation was explained and interment of the corpse was then made.

Child Lies Still Under a Train. Pottsville, Pa.—Joseph Bradley, aged six years, wandered upon the Pennsylvania railroad tracks south of this place and was run down by an engine, but miraculously escaped injury by coolly lying down upon his stomach between the rails.

The engineer saw the boy's perilous predicament too late to stop. Horror-stricken, he and his fireman went back after the engine had passed over young Bradley's body. They found him in tears, but unscathed.

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co. Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in place of "The Road to Wellville."

POLICE JUDGE WILLS. Will Gladly Answer the Questions of any Inquirer.

It is a generous offer that Police Judge J. H. Wills, of Cleveland, Ky., makes to sufferers from backache, kidney and bladder ills. Judge Wills knows the value of Doan's Kidney Pills and will answer the questions of any sufferer who writes to him. The Judge says: "I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to persons suffering from kidney disorders, backache, etc. It is the best remedy I have ever known and I will gladly answer any questions about it."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Action of Animal Charcoal. Why animal charcoal removes the color from colored liquids while wood charcoal has no effect has not been understood. A European chemist now finds that the action of the former is due to the presence of five and seven per cent. of nitrogen.

How's This? We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by the Catarrh Cure. F. J. CHERRY & CO., Toledo, O. We, the undersigned, of known and reputable standing for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honest in all his business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by him.

Things Mixed. Little Willie, who had been listening to some scientific talk about the brain's functions, pondered over some new expressions he had heard, and that night when he was going to bed asked earnestly:

"Mamma, when people's hair begins to turn, is it because the gray matter in their brains is leaching through?"

Macaroni Wheat. Salzer's strain of Macaroni or Kubanka wheat is absolutely pure and is from seed obtained from the Department of Agriculture. It is a Dakota grown wheat which laughs at droughts and elements and positively mocks black rust that terrible scourge and would be advanced of itself if it did not return from 40 to 50 bu. of the finest wheat the sun shines on per acre in good Ill., Ia., Mich., Wis., Ohio, Penn., Mo., Neb., Kan., and other lands, and 40 to 50 bu. per acre in arid lands. No rust, no insects, no failure.

JUST SEND 10c AND THIS NOTICE to Geo. A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., and they will send you the most original seed book published together with free samples of farm seeds such as Macaroni Wheat, Billion Dollar Grass, Victoria Rape, Sainfoin, the dry soil luxuriant, Russian Turnips, the desert grassifier, Emperor William Oats, more original than the Emperor himself, etc., etc.

And if you send 10c they will mail in addition a package of farm seed never before seen by you. John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis. K. & W.

Chance for Conversion. In the ante-bellum days, when Anson P. Morrill of Maine was making his first run for congress, a benchman of his opponent met an old minister of that section slowly jogging along the road on his old horse and hailed him with: "Who are you going to vote for?" "Well," said the old man, "I thought I should give Anson a vote. Anson has good timber in him, I believe." "Oh, but I don't see how you can vote for him! Don't you know he's a Universalist? He doesn't believe in a hell." With a quiet twinkle in his eye the old man said: "We'll send him to Washington. When he has served his two years if he doesn't believe in a hell I shall be very much surprised."

Was Not to Be Deceived.

Mrs. Murray Keith, a venerable Scotch lady, from whom Sir Walter Scott derived many of the traditional stories and anecdotes wrought up in his Waverley novels, taxed him one day with the authorship, which he as usual stoutly denied. "What," exclaimed the old lady, "do you think I dinna ken my ain goats among other folk's kail?"

Snails of the Common Kind.

Snails are of many varieties. A common variety of the snail sits around the house or the store, sleeps when he should be hustling, frowns on every project or civic betterment, and what little energy he puts forth is used in trying to turn backward the wheels of progress.—Washington Star.

Cheating the Wind.

The wind takes its revenge for the lack of golfing courtesy shown to it. In sheer wayward caprice its contemptuous gusts magnify a hundred-fold every trivial fault in the golfer's scientific armor. To be able to cheat the wind by grading stance, grip, and swing to suit the conditions of the moment is without doubt the highest perfection of the golfer's art.—The Field.

Floor Finish.

It is very hard to get the average finisher of floors to dispense with filler and varnish, insist upon it if you want your wood to keep in good condition for a long time.

Aids Tuberculosis Sufferers.

Of the tuberculosis patients treated in Pennsylvania's "Camp Sanitarium," which was established with the aid of the state, 75 per cent. have either recovered or been greatly improved.

Smallest of All Dwarfs.

The smallest man that ever lived was dwarf Bebe, born in France in 1840. He was just 20 inches high and eight pounds in weight when full grown.

Listen Only to Conscience.

Our friends exaggerate our virtues and our enemies multiply our faults. One's own conscience is the only true speaker.

Social Wisdom.

True social wisdom has many of the elements of love, and in common with charity is long suffering and kind.

The Thankful Heart.

A thankful heart is not the only greatest virtue but the parent of all other virtues.—Cicero.

Lawlessness in Italy.

Italy has more convicts per capita than any other country.

Uncle Eben.

"Don't make de mistake," said Uncle Eben, "of measurin' out yoh thanks by de 'mount dat yoh kin eat or drink, 'cause maybe dat's whut'll form de basis fo' figurin' up yoh remorse."

The Smell of Burnt Food.

If anything boiling over on the stove burns and smokes lift a stove lid an inch or so on one side and the smoke will draw into the fire.—Success.

Where Homer Made Trouble.

Epithet and Epitaph.

The difference between an epithet and an epitaph is that one is applied to a man before he is dead and the other after.

Poetry.

Some people like poetry because it can be bound in limp leather and used to decorate the library table.

Somewhat Different.

Sheridan, on being asked how he came to call Gibbon "luminous," answered: "I said vo-luminous."

Better Than Vast Wealth.

Poor and content is rich, and rich enough.—Shakespeare.

Flowers at Birth and Death.

When a French baby is born his cradle is apt to be surrounded with blooms. When a Frenchman dies his bier and his grave will be lavishly decorated with flowers. The sum spent on the adornment of graves runs into the millions annually in France—Chase alone, in Vermont, the Vermees de Tomilly family is kept covered with fresh flowers at a cost of 30,000 francs a year.

Baby's Idol.

In a certain part of China there is kept a little idol shaped like a child. Whenever a baby is suffering from indigestion, or some other ailment, the mother climbs up the hill to the hut where the idol is kept, rubs the idol and prays over it for her baby's recovery. So many hands have rubbed the little image that the outside is worn quite smooth.

His "Mill" with Chuck McBurr

By HUGH PENDEXTER

(Copyright, by Joseph D. Bowles.)

"We looked about Godthaub for two weeks before I could prevail upon Tib to let the Arctic circle glauks go to the board. Then we caught a New-foundland whaler and bent across to Cape Gridley, where we were to look for any mail that might have been brought up by the last boat.

"Then came the risk of wind that drove the tub well inside and made it imperative for us to tarry in that dread northland for yet another bout with fate, in which, incidentally, Tib was destined to eclipse all Ribby O'Hara and Harlow Shusher records, and make the butcher's Own, with his now working dollies. For it was after we left the whaler in high disgust at Tusak, or the Smooth Rock trading-post, that Tib cleaned up Chuck McBurr, the water-weight champion of the Little Seal river and Hudson strait. A million-dollar baby boy was the gate receipts, and the winner was to take all.

"Now, you know, I had always hunched for the boxing game a bit, but Tib, because of his New England upbringing, had but little use for the sport, and always insisted an angry man in a righteous cause could mace the average pug into oblivion. Yet, despite his aversion to professional bouts, he opened a new vista in this possibility, and was the first man to introduce the sprocket-wheel smash to the shores of Ungava and the Strait. Dear, dear! what a mill it was, and neither of 'em wore the American flag or talked into photographs!

"But let me back back and not spoil the finale. The circus management had given Tib carte blanche to pick up whatever odds and ends he could in event of failure to snare a slant, and as a side issue he had brought along the faithful old picture machine that once made him president of Arcate. It was his intention to snap a series of pictures of the rough and rugged life, on the side, and profit by them when once embarked in business on his own hook. This machine we had tenderly brought with us from Godthaub on the whaler. As soon as we reached the post, Finzer, the agent, gave us a 25-cent welcome, and when Tib set up his gallery in the long, low house and began squinting on the screen scenes from Central park and Palm Beach, our host could only wipe away nearly tears and moan, 'Man, man, never leave us.' This was a great game of Tib's. With that loyal apparatus he knew he could capture the affections and cooperation of any agent or factor on the coast, and obtain more favors than if he had paraded out a fat salary. It was to what Tib and his camera are to aborigines, and more than once did we find the movie paid for all bother and expense.

"And because he understood these men and had anticipated meeting them, he had waived his hostility to the bustling machine and had trotted along three or four six-round boxes between different celebrated Chickens and Gouger floys. I thought the gang would go daffy with glee. They kept him working the films slowly, so they could dope out just how each lemon was doped. And the old boy, although the pictures had taught him all he knew of the sport, could so adapt himself to their humor as to rant learnedly on just how a telling film was delivered. When the screen got hazy he would illustrate on my person, and the spectators quickly decided he invented flat-cuffs.

"I confess I deplore its brutality," he concluded, apologetically, evading my admiring gaze. "And yet candor compels me to insist that had the Wharf Rat led with his right he would have sent the Smasher to the ropes."

"Ah," sighed Finzer, lamely, sparing at his shadow, "if one of those lads could only stub up against the Chuck McBurr outfit and chasten it!"

"This called for an explanation, and our host described Tib, it seems his long, lank frame contained the crossed blood of the Athabascan Injun and the worst traits of a white sea captain. Finzer said Chuck's grandpa was a New Bedford whaler, when that port was wearing out the water with his own boats, and had lost his ship in Ungava in the early days. Half crazy, he had refused to return and face the owners, and had joined a tribe of vagrants on the Little Seal river instead, and ultimately took a wife. One thing the old fellow was strong on, and that was the art of self-defense. Sea captains in his day, of course, had to be ever ready to go to the mat with a mutinous sailor. Thus, because of his prowess and the Little Seal-people's ignorance of the pummeling business, he soon came to be considered the only patent medicine on the coast.

"Naturally he taught his son the game, and so it was handed down to the present polygot, who now bossed the tribe.

"Taken all together, they are a bad combination, all right," declared Finzer. "Several of our boys who had stolen up there to find out where they mine the gold they sometimes bring here to swap for rum, tobacco and gunpowder have forgotten to return. Chuck's people are not at home now, but when they return I am going to collect a few of my men and run them out. Only last night my best hunter was telling me the missionary at Tusak had lost his one-year-old boy—been kidnapped, you know; and if Chuck McBurr wasn't in on the deal the youngster eloped by himself. Say, give us some more of those fights. They're great!"

"It was Finzer's chance remark about the gold 'fales,' mined by the tenants of the Little Seal, that set Tib to yearning to discover their locale. Now that this Chuck, or whatever they style him, has led his children up north, why not speak over to that stream and do some prospecting, he began; and I knew he would have his way. For two days I stood him off, but as Finzer repeated there was no danger, the territory being deserted, I finally capitulated, and we borrowed two men and a boat and ultimately knocked along the coast and landed at the mouth of the river. We ordered the men to drop anchor and await our return, and to send a posse after us if we failed to ring in after seven days.

"For the first day we hardly got out of sight of our boat, so intent was Tib examining every bit of ledge and tangle with every bowlder with his hammer. But we didn't find enough gold to fill a tooth. For the next two days we pressed inward rapidly, and one night, while making coffee on a little island, about as large as your hat, and reached by jumping from rock to rock, I made a big hit. The island was apparently the butt-end of a gold mine. In fact, it needed no geologist to see we'd made a happy haul. Almost every layer of ledge, facing up stream, that I jerked loose contained several scoops of the lovely stuff. Tib said it we'd only follow the banks until we struck some falls we doubtless could scoop it out in hunks.

"Oh, yes," I lamented, as the circle narrowed and a galaxy of ugly squaws formed a menacing fringe on the outskirts. "Chuck is away from home, all right. I'll gamble he's miles from here."

"Don't blame me, Billy," remonstrated Tib. "Maybe they're not so passes near our respective heads as an intimation that when the blows fall they wouldn't be mistaken for thisle down. And we both observed that he was no novice with his dukes.

"What class is he in, Billy?" inquired Tib, drowsily, as I tossed on my skins unable to close an eye. "Think he must be in the ten-ton class. Thinks he's a fighter—out of date, antique—rolling guard—could— and the old fellow was sound asleep.

"In the morning Chuck bounced in, and point blank demanded me to tell where we had found the flakes. I told no sooner refused than I got a lot for causing consternation on the heavens. That agitated Tib, who sprang forward, only to be measured beside me by a new left hook. I was so angry I asked a few vain tears. There is something so extremely humiliating in a man's saucy fist.

"No cutting," he grunted, turning to go. "But lots of times I do this with these," and he admired his huge pads proudly.

"After he had left us, Tib collected his head together and tried to think. 'How was that solar-plexus blow given?' he suddenly asked.

"Why," I groaned, nursing my jaw, "he simply uncloaked his arm and thumped me."

"No, no," said Tib, pettishly, "I mean in the picture we were showing Finzer, where the man with a head like a bean knocked out a tall, angular shrimp."

"I explained listlessly, and was annoyed when he began going through with some physical-culture stunts. 'It's so different,' he observed, ducking lamely and spurring at the center pole. 'Ah, would you?' Ke-thump! 'When I was young it was a simple rushing, clinching pastime, with only the ear and eyebrow hold barred. And what was that hook the man with the freckled legs operated so neatly in folio number six?'

"I'm dead sick of this fighting business," I snarled, as my jaw gave a jump. "Never, my child," he cried, softly. "Ain't you got enough?"

"And hunk me, sir, but if he didn't walk to the exit and bogan calling Mr. McBurr a variety of undignified names in the trappers' patois.

"The heathens speedily gathered to get dusty." Then I stood on a bale of furs and played I was the nut-brown champion, so that he could not used to the chief's height, while he hoped about like a rubber ball and did some fearful contortions. While I didn't believe he could scare him to death by his maneuvers, "He won't make my weight," he declared, "but if I've any friends tell 'em to place their money on me, for I'll annex that baby."

"That night I rubbed him in oil, and he went to sleep early. Chuck kept the gang quiet outside our dormitory, and we were not disturbed until late next morning. When we stepped out into the sunlight the scenery impressed me as being out of joint. For in the midst of the Seal river's grand old stage settings was a roped arena that looked much like a parcel of the bowery. And about it was a sea of flat fices, all eying with admiration the lanky build of Chief Chuck. And he, despite the keen air, had been prompted by some New Bedford corpulence to strip to the waist, quite in the approved pug style. Near our corner stood an old hag holding a blue-eyed, white-haired, splendid boy wrapped in furs. Lord, sir! His hair and eyes showed me at once he was the missionary's kid.

"I'll teach him to accept my challenge," muttered Tib, throwing off his coat, rolling up his shirt sleeves, and yanking his belt up another notch with a real professional air. "Why don't he go and get a reputation before meeting the Green Mountain Cannon ball?"

"And I stepped into the corner and called the names of the fighters, and the crowd grunted in anticipation of much pleasure. 'Time!' I yelled, my throat giving a bit choky, as I picked up the head of Tib's little hammer, which some old had broken in driving the stakes. Mr. McBurr, water-weight champion of the Little Seal. Mr. T. Smith, the Vermont Passion Flower, who has licked everything on two legs, no matter how old, between the tropic of Capricorn and Pittsburgh. Ready for the first go."

"This spile struck Chuck as being good, and he grinned appreciatively, while Tib bowed gravely and limbered up his right arm.

"And, say, sir, if you could have seen these two midgits mince to champ's long steel arm shot out like a trip hammer; but, dear, dear! the way Tib bobbed under and around it and sank a pudgy fist into Chuck's cruel face, and followed it up with a two-ton blow over the heart, simply swept 'em off their feet, sir. The old lags began to yowl, and the men threw up their hands to the totem poles beseechingly and asked of their gods why this was thus, and Chuck went to the ropes.

"Oh, no, he wasn't tinged with venom when he got up and came gliding towards Rutland's Pride with long, catlike steps! You see, he saw his laurels would wither if he suffered more jolts like that, even if he ultimately won out by sheer strength. His game was to finish Tib easily and gracefully, and when I yelled, 'Hurray for the Green Mountain Cannon!' and Tib made a little deprecatory bow and smiled on the gurgling, crowing and receipts, he adopted a crouching style and got Tib over the left eye and below the belt before I could sound the kong.

"The last drive hurt my man like sin, and I was mad clean through at such a play. By rights he had lost the last by fouling. Waiting over to him I told him to eliminate that kind of dirty work or I'd give the decision to his opponent, but he grinned sardonically and, spitting out a tooth, made a playful lunge at my chin.

"Look out, old chap!" I warned, scuttling back to my panting nonpareil. "He's so mad he'll do all kinds of crooked work to down you."

"Guess it was an accident," gasped Tib, rubbing the pit of his stomach. "What was that hook the Spider used?"

"I told him, and the third round opened with my patron receding a present on the side of his jaw that quickly puffed up to the size of a South African diamond, but in the rush that followed he worked the hook, and the funny part of it was he thought it was on the level. He had ducked under Chuck's crouching guard and had sent a raking right jab from jaw to ear, and then, in some outlandish way I never understood, he gave the Seal river belleholder the point of his sturdy elbow just under the ear. Really, sir, it would have been more humane had he struck Chuck with a spilo-maul. He rolled and writhed in agony in his corner, trying to corral his panting chest, ignored his opportunity to finish the bout, and instead walked in his cocky gait to the ropes and reached out a trembling hand and patted the kid's white hair.

"That moment of tenderness was near his undoing. For the youngster grabbed his crimsoned fingers with all his tiny strength and wouldn't let go. And Tib, despite the fact Chuck was now up and doing with a heart to make him look like a minced man, would not yank rudely away. As a result they clinched, and Tib got a stinger on the side that nearly laid him low. I called them repeatedly, but the chief was thoroughly inflamed, and now, because of the elbow hook, and would not break so long as he thought he was winning. Then the kid took his foolish baby mind instinctively telling him the two men weren't acting polite, and he sent up a shrill howl you could hear even above the guttural clamor of the on-lookers.

"When Tib heard this quivering pipe he struggled like a madman, and gave Chuck the edge of his hand on the bridge of his nose. It was one of those rasping, irritating moves that bring back up.

"I'm almost too old for this game," growled Tib, his breath coming in sobs. "And that rogue acts more whole-some every round. But wait, I'll teach him who's holding big casino."

"In the next six rounds he uppercut his man twice, laying open both fat lips, and then smashed in one between the eyes that you could have heard reecho over in Greenland. The chief let out a howl and began fighting like an octopus, kicking, biting, and scratching, with Tib doing nothing but trying to keep clear.

"Break away!" I yelled, trying to dive between them with outstretched arms, quite like Spike McDougall in the pictures. But it was nearly two minutes before I could get them apart.

"He'll never fight square again," lamented Tib, tenderly feeling eight inches from his head in an effort to locate his ear. My heart sank as I counted his bruises, and I could have wept for the jolts he had received. Then my hand hit against the small hammer-head in my side pocket, and inspired, I whispered, passing it over with wizard skill: 'No him. It was almost the grasp.'

"I hate to be so low and ornery even in this kind of a mill," he remonstrated, paining it with all his old-time, parlor-magic rage.

"Remember the tow-head," I urged. "Gimme it," he growled, forgetting he had already made it disappear.

"Chief Chuck now lunged forward, not waiting for the word. His eyes were bloodshot and soap-suds flecked his mouth. I could see he had discarded all frills and fancies and meant just plain, ugly business. In a second they were a revolving wheel of legs and arms.

"Sank him!" I howled, dancing up and down, and suddenly the bunch flew into two pieces, and each piece finally quieted down and resolved itself into a man. Tib was the man standing.

"I feel kind of cheap," he grinned, feebly.

"But, dear, dear! if you only could have seen Chuck! He sat perfectly quiet, gazing abstractly at a tree, only moving to cautiously place his hand on his jaw. And the astonished crowd saw the swatting flesh puff out to the size of an orange. You see, sir, Tib had been unable to really injure his iron frame and bullet head heretofore. He had made him smart, had pestered him, but he hadn't really weakened him any. That smash on the jaw with the hammer-head was like having the elevated hit you. And the mob, always having believed him invincible, couldn't understand it.

"When he staggered to his feet he lurched to Tib with open hands, and sorrowfully and carefully examined the death dealing knuckles. Then he shook his head grudgingly and croaked: 'Big medicine. White man's Shaman is great spirit!'

"I'm a Methodist," said Tib, grimly, keeping this brass knuckle from all human ken.

"Methodist big medicine," repeated Chuck simply, walking back to his corner with a slightly swollen, erratic gait. "Dann big medicine."

"One of his henchmen speedily brought him a case bottle of cheap rum, and after swallowing the greater portion of this he began to change his mind a bit and protest that the Seal Shaman overstepped any Methodist by several yards. And cracking his heels together, he rushed to drug Tib from his corner. It was at this critical point, sir, that Tib delivered his famous sprocket-wheel swing, the blow that lamed his shoulder for a year.

"For, just as Chuck sank almost to one knee in letting drive his slawey left, Tib sprang two feet into the air and swung his terrible, battling right in a complete circle and brought it down, palm outward, squarely on top of the astonished, barbarous slugger's thick-thatched cranium, not once, but thrice. The hammer-head projected from the flat for an inch. Chuck simply rolled over on his side with one deep groan, and his children howled in horror.

"One, two, three," panted Tib, standing over his foe and accompanying each count-out numeral with a trembling sweep of his fat forearm.

"O wow! ow!" groaned the heathens.

"Four, five," continued Tib, firmly. "O wow! ow! Shaman! O-agh!"

"Waited the flat-faced audience, praying in vain for their totem poles.

"Da, da, da," gurgled the baby, as its custodian rolled it into the ring its custodian rolled it into the ring so as to gain freedom of motion to beat her head against the hideously carved wooden pillars.

"Six, seven," added Tib, remorselessly, stroking his nose.

"Faster, faster! Give him the count in a rush!" I screamed, entirely losing my head.

"Eight, nine," the old chap called, now counting more slowly in rebuke to me, thus giving the prostrate chief a fair chance to rally.

"And the tribe, thinking he was pumping more evil-spirits into his leader, began supplicating him with a medley of sounds to quit his magic.

"Ten—and out!" cried Tib, hugging the baby close.

"Down and out! Hoorary!" I yelled, cutting an intricate pigeon wing, much to the kid's felicitation.

"Out!" growled Mr. McBurr, thickly, staggering to his feet. Say, white man, what did it? What brought the man, what did it? And in awe and with darkness? And in awe and with something akin to reverence he lightly stroked the cluster of horns on the top of his head. For the trio of blows had caused as many little mountain peaks to push up the coarse, black hair.

"Big medicine," replied Tib, setting the baby on his tired shoulder and jumping over the ropes.

An Ensemble of the Most Villainous Apologies for Biceps.

"The spectators instinctively started to stop us, but Chuck, being a square sport, once the battle had been fought, howling head waved them back. 'Let them all go. Methodist! Big medicine!' he muttered.

"Owow! ow!" coughed the tribe. "And with the tot in his arms my patron led the way down the Little Seal until we found the men and the boat. I looked back once and saw that Chief Chuck McBurr was still clinging to the ropes of the ring, while his children seemed intent on packing up and moving away. Maybe they were deserting a leader whose medicine was so weak, but it was almost pathetic to see the big man lingering on the scene of his downfall.

"And although we never went back for the gold, and although that was the only Tib ever shied his castor into a ring, he always regrets he had to use the hammer-head, until I reminded him of the boy baby kicking up his heels in his father's home in Tusak.

SAVES LIFE OF AN INDIAN CHIEF

JOHN CUDAHY, JR., SON OF CHICAGO PACKER, DRAGS PONCA RULER FROM WATER.

OFFERS DAUGHTER AS REWARD

Youth Declines Ducky Maiden—Is Badly Injured by Heroic Feat and Tribe Holds Dance to Aid His Recovery.

Miss. Okla.—John Cudahy, Jr., son of the Chicago packer, is the hero of Oklahoma, and were he willing, he could have the daughter of the chief of the Ponca Indians for his bride. The other day, at the port of his life, young Cudahy saved the life of Horse Eagle, ruler of the Poncas, when the chief was struggling in the ice-filled waters of Salt Fork river.

With two ribs broken, his face and scalp badly lacerated, and threatened with pneumonia from his plunge into the chilly river, Cudahy lies in a bed at the 101 ranch, happy that he survived and that the rescued Indian escaped unharmed.

Overjoyed that their loved leader was saved to him and to show their gratitude to his brave rescuer, the Ponca braves performed one of their weird religious dances on the plain surrounding the ranchhouse—a dance that is an appeal to the Great Father to spare their hero and give strength. Cudahy back his breath and strength.

While young Cudahy, who came to the ranch recently to recuperate, was centering along the banks of the Salt Fork the other morning, he met with the remarkable adventure, which, if he would take an Indian bride, might one day make him chief of the Poncas.

Hearing shouts from the river, Cudahy investigated and found Chief Horse Eagle, heavily laden with his trappings, astride his pony, struggling among the floating cakes of ice in the water. Entangled in a strap and reins, it was but a matter of a few minutes until the red chief would be ready for the happy hunting grounds.

Without a moment's hesitation young Cudahy leaped from his horse and plunged into the icy waters, open knife in hand. Cutting the straps that held the red man to his pony, the rescuer dragged the almost exhausted Indian to the bank and shouted for help.

He Plunged Into the Icy Waters, Knife in Hand.

help, which soon came. Cudahy's injuries, while severe, were not serious, and unless pneumonia sets in will do him little harm.

After being cared for by his tribe Chief Horse Eagle returned to the ranchhouse in the afternoon with a hundred members of his tribe, his medicine men and his loveliest daughter, the last his gift of gratitude to the man who had saved his regal life. Mr. Cudahy sent down word from his room that he deeply appreciated the honor implied by the bestowal, but paleface conventionalities forbade acceptance.

Miss Horse Eagle pointed her disappointment. She had been quite resigned to the thought of exchanging her tepee for a Chicago mansion.

Lost Man Slept Week in Hay. Elvira, O.—The disappearance of William Fernald from Amherst was strangely solved a week later when Charles Schultz, removing hay from his mow, ran a fork into the missing man, who awoke, apparently in good health.

Fernald had last been seen near a log that served as a footbridge over a swollen stream, and it was supposed he had fallen from the log and drowned. The creek was dragged and searched all the way to the lake without results. Fernald says he fell into the stream, but dragged himself out and made for the nearest barn. There he found a quantity of hard elder, with which he restored his circulation, then crawled into the hay and knew nothing until his rudo awakening. He supposed that he had merely slept over night.

In Bed for 40 Years. A strange family has been discovered at Flispondon, near Bristol, Gloucestershire, England. At an old-fashioned cottage there resides an aged lady, and her son and daughter. The old lady has not left her bed for 40 years, and her son and daughter, who are about 60 years of age, take it in turns to remain in bed for a period of from several months to a year, the food of the two in bed being supplied by the one who is not thus "resting." All three are quite well—at least the parent, of about 90 years of age, is in as good health as can be expected, and no doctor is in attendance. The opinion is held that many years ago the old lady took a fancy to lying in bed which she has indulged for practically half her lifetime, and that her children have a similar inclination.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

Mrs. Wm. Young, of 6 Columbia Ave., Rockland, Me., says: "I was troubled for a long time with dreadful backaches and a pain in my side, and was miserable in every way. I doctored until I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. I read that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to try it: after taking three bottles I can truly say that I never felt so well in my life."

Mrs. Augustus Lyon, of East Earl, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I had very severe backaches, and pressing-down pains. I could not sleep, and had no appetite. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a new woman."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN. For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, nervous prostration.

John Muir's Simplicity. Once, in a talk with E. H. Harriman, John Muir, author and ranchman, said that he was richer than Mr. Harriman.

"I know what you mean," said Mr. Harriman, "but I won't admit it. Don't you think wealth is a good thing for a man?"

"Not great wealth—no. Your rich man renounces too much. I would rather lie down at night by an old spring I know up in the Sierras than to own the Waldorf-Astoria—that is, if I had to live in it!"—Bookman.

Senator Delivers Gift to Chinaman

WASHINGTON.—Senator W. J. Stone the other day journeyed out to the Providence hospital, near here, where, after long search, he located the cot of a Chinaman to whom the senator presented a packet. The Chinaman is L. Ah Maw, valet to Admiral Dewey, and the packet was a remembrance to Mrs. Maw from a brother. The gift was entrusted to Mrs. Stone at Manila, who promised that it should reach the proper hands in Washington.

Sensor and Mrs. Stone were in Manila last fall. During their stay the Chinaman served as their particular attendant and was so zealous in his efforts to please that the Missouri senator and his wife came to like him very much. When the American party started upon their return to the United States their Chinaman confided the fact that he had a brother in Washington, and wished, as the greatest

God to Be Restored to Nation's Coins

THE motto "In God We Trust" will be restored to the gold coins from which it was removed by President Roosevelt's orders. The House committee on coinage and measures has reported a bill providing for restoration of the motto and its permanent retention. Indications are that it will pass both houses. President Roosevelt will not veto any measure of this kind, and has so told several of his callers.

Representative James, who introduced one of the bills to restore the motto, said hundreds of letters were still coming in protesting against the abolishment of the motto.

Immediately after the new gold pieces of the Saint Gaudens design were received from the Philadelphia mint early in November last year, the discovery was made that the motto "In God We Trust" had been omitted.

Tom and Tabby Hit by Cruel Cat Law

REST-DISTURBING feline variety of the midnight back fence variety will be unknown in Washington, says District Commissioner MacFarland, when Congress enacts into law a bill he has had prepared.

Mr. MacFarland is president of the board of commissioners of the district and is preparing to submit to his two colleagues his bill for their approval. It exercises the taxing power to exterminate the cats of the national capital. The midnight Thomas cats are to be taxed $5 per year and the anti-race-suicide tabby cats are to be taxed $10. Cats to escape the

Congressman Has Plan to Help Farmers

REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT of Kansas, chairman of the house committee on agriculture, has conceived a novel plan which, he believes, would enable the farmers of the country to produce better and far larger crops than heretofore.

Mr. Scott's proposition involves the establishment of 100 experimental farms, of one acre each, in every county in a group of four western agricultural states for the purpose of giving the farmers a practical demonstration of the best methods of growing different crops. It is proposed that

Big Hats Improve Health.

Cause Women to Stand Straight and Walk Better.

The athletic young man dodged the millinery creation, which kept bobbing around beside him, but he said not a word in protest. "I am awfully sorry," murmured the girl at his side, "but you see the hats are made so this year and we have to wear 'em."

The man, who was a physical culture teacher, shook his head. "I'm not sorry," he said. "The millinery this year is doing much to make women stand up straighter and walk better. Yes, I really mean it. You see, with the narrow front brim and the wide back brim, most of the trimming runs off the back."

The woman gasped at his knowledge of hats and giggled at his way of describing them.

"So you see," he went on, "this tends to throw the weight of the hat backward. Now in order to balance the weight in that position a woman

SUGGESTIONS TO AND FOR MOTHERS.

Children are wonderfully amenable to "suggestion," good or bad. I have long contended and often proved that "suggestion" used intelligently by the mother is a most potent factor for good as, thereby, the most willful child may be made submissive; not by destroying the will, but by directing it into proper channels. Through the same agency, children may be cured of bad habits, undesirable traits, inclination to studies, etc., etc.

The time to shape a character when it is most susceptible to maternal influences is during the natural—not hypnotic—sleep of the child.

The general opinion is that a person asleep is, for the time being, dead to the world; but a knowledge of the fact that the subjective mind never sleeps should make one careful of what he says in the presence of a sleeper.

Natural sleep is not a condition of insensibility to external impressions, but rather a condition of intention. The sleeper hears, but he does not heed at the time the suggestion is made. It is not difficult to introduce ideas to one's consciousness which shall make a permanent and deep impression through the subjective mind upon the objective, or waking, mind.

The Method to Pursue.

Much depends upon the age and the disposition of the child. No one can understand this better than the mother.

As a rule the best way to approach the child is to say (as it is about to retire): "Mamma is going to talk to you tonight while you are asleep, and you will hear and understand it all, but you will not awaken."

Some children will, of course, be quite curious to know why you are going to talk to them, what you are going to talk about and why you don't talk to them when they are awake.

In some instances the mother may sit by the side of the bed and talk in a general way to the child as he sleeps. Thus talking, in a quiet manner, the child, as a rule, soon becomes unconscious, and as it drops asleep the mother says: "This is mother (or mamma) talking to you. You will not awaken. You will sleep quietly. You are now very quiet and restful. You can speak to me without awakening. Do you hear me talking to you now? Say 'Yes.' You will not awaken. Now I touch your lips with my fingers and you can speak. Say 'Yes, mamma, I hear you.'"

You should not expect the child to awaken, but should sit still unobtrusively and open his eyes, the mother should not relinquish her attempt, but gently close the eyelids, at the same time suggesting again: "Nothing will disturb you; you will sleep quietly now, and hear what mamma says, because it is all for your good and you will be so pleased to do what mamma suggests."

It is well if you stroke the child's forehead gently, as this will have a quieting effect and occasion the sleeper to your presence. You should then proceed with your suggestions of those things that you desire to eliminate—disobedience, untidiness, idleness, untruthfulness, nail biting, lack of application to studies, music, etc., etc.—whatever you feel the child needs. Speak plainly, but quietly, yet with sufficient positiveness to be impressive.

If you wish to exact a promise from the child you should say: "I want you to promise me that you will never again say, 'I promise you, mamma, that I never will.' You should repeat this several times."

I have always found it most effective to use the first person, singular, thus having the alternative made by the child himself of a rule, saying: "You will do this or you will do that." To illustrate: "I'll do as mamma wants me to; I'll not do anything to hurt mamma; I'll make everybody happy by being good to them, etc., etc."

These suggestions need not be confined entirely to bad habits, but to physical ailments and various bodily conditions.

One of my pupils cured her little girl (a very small child) of enuresis. This was easily accomplished, even after guaranteed remedies and the family physician had utterly failed.

Another mother cured her 14-year-old boy of a very bad case of stammering; cured him while he slept, and the boy does not know to this day how the cure was effected.

There are cases covering almost every phase of mental and physical condition. I shall give one more and the means employed.

My niece, 13 years of age, brought me her card at the close of the school year, and I noticed that her "marking" was very low on one particular study. She informed me that she took no interest in the subject; hence made no effort in its preparation.

During the summer I would have her take a nap in the afternoon, lying on the floor, as I read my paper. I told her I would talk to her while she slept. She said: "What are you going to talk to me about, uncle?" "Oh, something for your good." "But I won't hear you if I am asleep." "Yes, you will, and you will answer me, too, without awakening."

I began by saying, "You will sleep well and my talking will not disturb you. Do you hear me?" "Yes, sir," came faintly. "I noticed on your card that in one of your studies you had a very low marking. That will not oc-

SPORTING FACTS AND FANCIES

Bill Papke, the western cyclone and present champion of the middle-weight championship title, is certainly making plenty of money out of the fighting game. It success sticks to him like a well bank roll when he retires from the game. Bill first began fighting November 26, 1906. Since he has been a professional pugilist he has made $15,600 out of his battles, including the wagers he won on himself. The smallest amount Papke ever received for boxing was $40, which he got for engaging in a limited round fight with the Mexican Wanderer. He made short work of the Mexican Wanderer, putting him out in four rounds. This victory gave him confidence, and he started out to make his living as a pugilist. His next battle was with Red Mori, a rascal, whom he put away in three rounds. Since then Papke has been going right along the line meeting all the fighters that were willing to take him on.

The largest amount which Papke has drawn out of a battle was $2,388. He received this sum for his ten-round fight with Hugo Kelly, at Milwaukee, which was declared a draw, although the majority of the spectators and fight critics claimed that Bill should have had the decision. His other fights have netted him from $700 to $1,000 for his end. He has also had a few weeks' theatrical engagement, for which he received $500 for each week. Besides these engagements he has also taken part in three exhibition bouts and got $100 for each bout. Since Papke began fighting he has only engaged in 25 battles, 18 of which he has won by knockouts, fought four draws and was awarded the decision in four others.

Pennsylvania university's intercollegiate chances were dealt a hard blow the other day when Guy Haskins, the mile champion, was dropped from the dental department of the university. That means that he will not be allowed to compete for the red and blue. Last year, besides winning the intercollegiate championship for the second time, he lowered the mile record to 4 minutes 20.35 seconds. The former mark was held for several years by Orton of Pennsylvania. In the intercollegiate last year Haskins made a wonderful showing, winning not only the mile race, but also the half-mile, in 1 minute 47.45 seconds. Haskins was also the winner of the intercollegiate cross-country race last fall at Princeton.

The announcement of Haskins' suspension was made known by the faculty committee. It is caused by Haskins' failing to keep up with his work. It was hoped the committee would give Haskins a rehearing, but there seems little chance of that now and he seems to be lost to Pennsylvania. The suspension doesn't in any way affect his standing as an amateur athlete, and, now that he no longer represents Pennsylvania, he may run for the New York A. C., of which club he is a registered member.

That "Rube" Waddell did not cost the St. Louis Browns a cent is the word conveyed to a Pittsburgh sporting man by a player on the Philadelphia team. The latter says that Connie Mack was so disgusted with Waddell that he determined to get rid of him this year, even if he had to give him away. Mack asked valuers from every club in the league and promptly got them from all except St. Louis. As the club refusing to waive claim must take the player at the value price, $1,500, that is what "Rube" cost the Browns, and all stories that he cost $8,000 are being laughed at by the knowing ones. However, in his telegram telling McAleer that he was welcome to Waddell, Mack said: "If you take him I will forfeit the waive claim." Many circumstances led up to "Rube's" disposal. The other players revolted against him and declared they would not play when he was pitching. Not that they had anything against him—they all admired the erratic country boy—but they never knew when he was going to take a trip in a flying machine and spoil all their good work. They had no confidence with him in the box. Consequently, for the good of the cause he was turned over to McAleer.

John Mangseth of Duluth, Minn., established a new American ski jump record at Chester Creek hill in Duluth the other day. The jump was 217 feet, three feet farther than his brother, Or, Mangseth, jumped a year ago at Redwing, when he made an American long-distance jump record.

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS.

Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. Hilo Bordwell, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

Modus Vivendi.

The handsome but impecunious young chap who had married the rich and elderly widow began to hint that it was time to give him the control of her funds and the management of her estate.

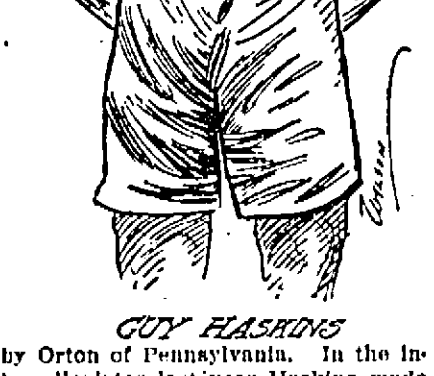

"Laurel," she said, "I shall allow you a sufficient income for the supply of your wants, but I expect to keep my business affairs in my own hands. This is not a consultation. This is a limited partnership."
